A PLAIN GUIDE FOR BUSINESS OWNERS

The first reply usually wins the job.

Lead response time, explained in plain English, with the research and a simple setup that works.

> Most owners are not slow because they do not care. They are slow because they are on a ladder, under a car or with a customer when the phone rings. That is the job.
>
> This guide shows what the research says about response time, how to test your own speed tonight, and a simple setup that answers every lead in minutes without you living on your phone. Every statistic has a source listed on the last page.

Devan Towslee
Founder, Quantum Arbor LLC · Owner, Towslee's Got Pressure LLC

Before you start. This guide is general education written from our own experience running service businesses. It is not legal, financial, tax or professional advice, and it is not a promise of any result. Every business, market and customer is different. Use it as a starting point, check anything that touches the law with a qualified professional, and make your own call about what fits your business. Full terms: learn.quantumarbor.biz/terms

START HERE

The words, in plain English

You do not need a new vocabulary to answer leads faster. These are the only words that come up.

Lead

Anyone who raised their hand

A phone call, a web form, a Facebook or Instagram message, a Google Business Profile message or an email asking about your work.

Why it matters: Every one of them already spent effort to reach you. A lead is the most expensive thing a small business pays for, in ads, time or reputation.

Response time

How long they wait

The time from the moment someone reaches out until a useful reply gets back to them.

Why it matters: It is the one number most owners have never measured, and it decides who gets the first real conversation.

Speed to lead

The habit, not the tool

Answering new leads as fast as possible, every time, including nights and weekends.

Why it matters: Being quick once is luck. Being quick every time is a system.

Missed call text back

Voicemail is where calls go to die

When a call goes unanswered, the caller automatically gets a text so the conversation keeps going.

Why it matters: Many callers will not leave a voicemail. A text gives them an easy way to keep talking to you instead of calling the next business.

Auto reply

Instant, honest, useful

A message that goes out on its own the moment a lead comes in.

Why it matters: A good one sounds like you, answers the obvious question and gives a clear next step. A bad one just says “we got your message.”

One lead inbox

Also called a CRM or shared inbox

One place where every call, form and message lands, so nothing hides in an app you forgot to check.

Why it matters: You cannot answer fast what you do not see.

Booking link

Let them pick the time

A link that shows your open times and lets the customer book a call, an estimate or a visit.

Why it matters: It turns “I will call you back” into a booked appointment while the customer is still interested.

Consent

Permission to message them

A record that a person agreed to hear from you, and how. It matters most for marketing texts.

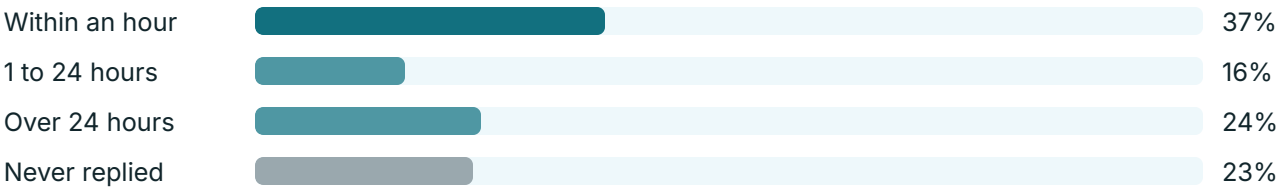
Why it matters: Fast is good. Fast without permission can turn into a legal problem.

PROOF 1

Most businesses answer slowly

Researchers writing in Harvard Business Review sent web leads to 2,241 US companies and timed the replies. Only about 37 percent answered within an hour. Around a quarter took more than a day. Roughly 23 percent never answered at all. Among companies that did reply within 30 days, the average wait was 42 hours. [1] [2]

How fast 2,241 companies replied to a web lead



Source: Oldroyd, McElheran and Elkington, Harvard Business Review, 2011. Shares are rounded. [1]

PROOF 2

The first hour matters most

The same research team looked at more than a million sales leads. The pattern was simple: the longer a lead waits, the colder it gets.

7x

Companies that tried to reach a lead within an hour were nearly seven times as likely to qualify it as those that waited even one hour longer. [1]

60x

Compared with companies that waited 24 hours or more, first hour responders were more than 60 times as likely to qualify the lead. [1]

5 min

An earlier MIT study of more than 15,000 leads found the odds of reaching a lead fell sharply between the 5 minute and 30 minute marks. [3]

An honest note on these numbers. These studies measure the odds of reaching and qualifying a lead, not guaranteed sales, and the exact multipliers get repeated loosely online. Read them as direction, not as a promise.

PROOF 3

Test your own business tonight

You do not need a study to see where you stand. These tests take about twenty minutes and cost nothing.

1. Fill out your own website form.
   Use a personal email. Time how long until a useful reply shows up, not just a receipt.

2. Call your business line after hours.
   Listen to what a caller hears. Is there any way for them to get an answer before morning?

3. Message your own profiles.
   Send a message to your Facebook page, Instagram and Google Business Profile. Note when someone actually sees it.

4. Write the times down.
   That is your real response time. Run the same tests again after every change.

FAST IS NOT ENOUGH

What a good first reply looks like

A good first reply shows a real business got the message, answers the obvious question or asks the one that matters, and gives one clear next step.

A reply that stalls

> Thanks for your message. We will get back to you soon.

No name, no answer, no next step. The customer keeps shopping.

A reply that moves the job forward

> Hi Sam, thanks for reaching out to Lakeside Detailing. What year and model is the vehicle? You can also pick an estimate time with the booking link below, and I will call you back by 5 today.

Lakeside Detailing is a made up shop for this example. A name, one useful question, a booking link and a time.

THE SYSTEM

A simple setup that works

1. One place where every lead lands.
   Calls, forms and messages all flowing into one inbox or one CRM, so nothing hides in an app you forgot to check.

2. An instant, honest first reply on every channel.
   Form submissions get an email and, with permission, a text. Missed calls get a text back. Social messages get an auto reply with your booking link.

3. Your top five answers, written once.
   Price range, service area, how soon, what is included and how to book, in your own words.

4. A booking link or a callback time.
   Let people pick a time themselves. If you quote on site, make the next step booking the visit.

Then hold one rule: a real person follows up the same day. Automation buys you time. It does not replace the conversation.

STAY ON THE RIGHT SIDE OF THE LINE

The rules to respect

General information about United States rules, not legal advice for your business.

Texting has rules. The TCPA and FCC rules govern automated and marketing texts. A reply about the request someone just sent you is different from promotional texts sent later. Get clear permission before marketing by text and keep a record of it. [4]

Honor STOP right away, on every channel, and note it so nobody on your team messages them again. [4]

Keep reasonable hours. Federal rules limit telephone solicitations to between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. in the recipient's time zone. [7]

Know the rules are moving. In January 2025 a federal court threw out the FCC's planned one to one consent rule, and the FCC formally removed it later that year. The core consent rules still apply. [5] [6]

Be honest about automation. Do not pretend an automated message is you typing live. [8]

Protect what people send you. Keep addresses, phone numbers and photos in a secure system.

Texting rules depend on your industry, your state and how you collect permission. If you plan to send marketing texts, talk to an attorney first.

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

A quick self check

Count how many you can honestly say yes to.

- [ ] A web form lead gets a useful reply within five minutes, any time of day.
- [ ] A missed call gets a text back automatically.
- [ ] Facebook, Instagram and Google messages land in the same place as everything else.
- [ ] I have written answers to my top five questions.
- [ ] Every first reply includes one clear next step.
- [ ] A real person follows up the same day.
- [ ] I know my real response time because I tested it.

6 or 7: you are ahead of most businesses. 3 to 5: one or two fixes will make a real difference. 0 to 2: this is probably where your best jobs are slipping away, and it is fixable.

A WORD BEFORE YOU GO

It is okay to ask for help

Wiring every channel into one place, writing replies that sound like you and setting up texting permission the right way is real technical work. Handing it to someone who builds it every day is the same call you make when you hire an accountant.

Run a tint, PPF, ceramic or detail shop?

AutoStyleIQ is the lead response agent we are building for auto styling shops. It answers new leads in minutes, in your voice, and books them.

autostyleiq.com

Free Operations Health Scan

About ten minutes of questions about your website, booking, lead flow and online presence. Your results build on the spot, and you can book an optional free 30 minute review call from the results page.

quantumarbor.biz/#book

Get each new guide by email: learn.quantumarbor.biz/#notify · All of Devan's sites: devan-towslee-links.pages.dev

Questions and answers

How fast should a small business respond to a new lead?

Aim for a useful first reply within five minutes and a real conversation the same day. A Harvard Business Review study of more than a million leads found companies that responded within an hour were nearly seven times as likely to qualify the lead as those that waited longer, and an MIT study found the odds of reaching a lead dropped sharply after the first five minutes.

Will an automatic reply annoy people?

Not when it is honest, short and useful. What frustrates people is silence, or a reply that does not tell them what happens next. Say who you are, answer the obvious question and give one clear next step.

I cannot answer the phone while I work. Am I stuck?

No. A missed call text back plus a booking link covers most of the gap. You call back when you are free, and the customer already knows when to expect you.

Can I text every lead I get?

Replying to someone about the request they just sent you is generally treated differently from marketing texts. For anything promotional, get clear permission first, honor STOP right away and keep to reasonable hours. Texting rules change and depend on your situation, so check with an attorney before running marketing texts.

Do I need a CRM to answer leads fast?

You need one place where every lead lands and nothing gets lost. For a very small business that can be a shared inbox. For most growing businesses a CRM is the simpler way to get there, because it also tracks follow ups.

Will answering faster guarantee more sales?

No, and nobody honest can promise that. Fast response improves your odds of reaching people and having the conversation. Your price, your work and your follow through still decide the job.

Sources

1. The Short Life of Online Sales Leads. Oldroyd, McElheran and Elkington, Harvard Business Review, March 2011. https://hbr.org/2011/03/the-short-life-of-online-sales-leads
2. The short life of online sales leads, abstract and figures. ResearchGate listing of the Harvard Business Review article. https://www.researchgate.net/publication/298137032_The_short_life_of_online_sales_leads
3. Lead Response Management Study. James Oldroyd, MIT Sloan, with InsideSales.com, 2007. https://25649.fs1.hubspotusercontent-na2.net/hub/25649/file-13535879-pdf/docs/mit_study.pdf
4. 47 CFR 64.1200, Delivery restrictions. Code of Federal Regulations, via Cornell Law School Legal Information Institute. https://www.law.cornell.edu/cfr/text/47/64.1200
5. 11th Circuit Vacates FCC's One to One TCPA Consent Rule. Wiley Rein, January 2025. https://www.wiley.law/alert-UPDATE-11th-Circuit-Vacates-FCCs-One-to-One-TCPA-Consent-Rule
6. The FCC Issues Final Rule Formally Eliminating the One to One Consent Requirement. Goodwin, September 2025. https://www.goodwinlaw.com/en/insights/blogs/2025/09/the-fcc-issues-final-rule-formally-eliminating-the-one-to-one-consent-requirement
7. New Class Action Threat: TCPA Quiet Hours and Marketing Messages. Privacy World, March 2025. https://www.privacyworld.blog/2025/03/new-class-action-threat-tcpa-quiet-hours-and-marketing-messages/
8. FTC Policy Statement on Deception. Federal Trade Commission. https://www.ftc.gov/business-guidance/resources/ftc-policy-statement-deception

Guides from Quantum Arbor are general education. They are not legal, financial, tax or other professional advice, no result is promised, and reading them does not make you a client of Quantum Arbor LLC. You are responsible for the decisions you make with them. Terms of Use: learn.quantumarbor.biz/terms. © 2026 Quantum Arbor LLC.